As it marches toward war deflagration, the crisis of the capitalist world order mixes up plans and cracks old certainties. Between new helmet-wearing left wings increasingly aligned with the agenda of big capital, and old right wings occasionally disguised as doves in the name of "national interests," the menu set by both is the same: a technologically incarcerated society in a state of permanent war; the incremental elimination of all undesirables. A world which has in the Israel-system and in the genocide of Palestinians its most dramatic compendium, and of which the war in Ukraine (and now also in Russia) is the accelerator. These thoughts can be vertiginous, but without them no prospect of revolutionary transformation can be found - and that is the only way out of the ongoing catastrophe.
